

WHP enjoys a successful MTI EXPO 2019

The new-look White Horse Plastics (WHP) enjoyed a successful exhibition at last month's Med-Tech Innovation exhibition at the NEC, May 15-16th.

Managing Director Paul Bobby and Colin Voller, Quality Director – part of the WHP MBO team - represented the company at the UK's annual med-tech show in its new location at the NEC Birmingham.

Paul Bobby said that 'our new MBO team fully intend to reach our company's full potential in the medical device market. We have technical and engineering competences that are second to none, a successful track record in this sector, and MTI EXPO gave us a great opportunity to show our manufacturing skill sets to advantage, and to network with the industry generally.'

WHP's ISO 13485 qualifications put the company squarely in line for those looking to manufacture for the worldwide medical-manufacturing supply chain, and in addition to this, WHP also holds general manufacturing standard ISO9001, the environmental standard ISO 14001 and the automotive quality standard IATF 16949.

Paul Bobby, WHP Factory Manager said that 'the general mood of the show seemed very positive: OEMs in med-tech, healthcare and pharmaceutical markets are perhaps raising their sights and ambitions in line with growth and global trends in the med-tech industries.

Self-administered kits and devices, personal and localised medical solutions and other developments are driving the industry to become ever more creative. WHP is here to make that creativity a manufacturing reality and we were pleased to discuss several such ideas at the EXPO show.
